New i31 and i41 from Contura

Fireplace with both natural stone and insert

A classic open stove - or a modern fireplace with large windows? New Contura i31 and Contura i41 are two in one; an exclusive hearth all in stone with long heat retention and a large window for the fire. Walnut brown sandstone with unique natural veining, grey sober soapstone or plain white cast stone, the choice is yours.

When the long winter nights draw in, the stove is the most appreciated part of our home interiors. For millions of years fire and stone have had great significance to humans and the 21st century is no exception. In addition to giving heat, the fireplace has also become an increasingly important part of the interior design of Swedish homes. Markaryd in Småland has combined many years of Swedish engineering with modern design and environmental thinking – the result is the Contura i31 and Contura i41.

The i31 and i41 from Contura are both exclusive fireplaces in stone and energy sources that store the heat longer and give a comforting sense of wellbeing in the modern home. While the function and output are proven to be the best on the market, the appearance of the stove is determined by the home. Contura i31 has a straight door and i41 has an angled door, both have ergonomic handles.

The surround is available in walnut brown sandstone, sober grey soapstone or plain white cast stone. A very large 200 kg heat tank is available as an option if you want a boost of extra heat storage. There are also shelves and benches in black granite. All products come with the Clean Burning System, which keeps the glass clean and soot free. Regardless of model and material selection, the product is supplied as a complete unit that is easily attached to a chimney.

“Our new product has the charm of an old open fire but the finesse and technology of a modern wood-burning stove. In addition, we believe that many people will appreciate the fact that they are so simple to install”, says Phil Wood, UK Sales Manager for Contura

Contura i31 and Contura i41 are CE marked according to the EU's safety and environmental requirements.
